"The Red Mill."

Martin & Emery Co.'s production of "The Red Mill" this season is presented on a scale of lavishness that dwarfs the organization of last season. The scenery has been built upon the largest scale, the costumes all replaced by new and costly designs, while the company of principals have been most carefully selected and embraces many names familiar to theatregoers. The chorus of forty is said to be one of the best ever organized. It is safe to assume that the production will prove one of the most brilliant theatrical events of the season. ## Reforming Mildred Mildred was astonishingly proficient in the gentle art of self-depreciation. She had a horror of permitting people to think herself or her possessions better than they really were. She could not bear that any one should believe she was trying to appear smarter or nicer than she was in reality.

For instance, if a person casually admired her bracelet, which was set with tiny French brilliants that defied the criticism of anyone but an expert with a magnifying glass, Mildred always spoke up hurriedly.

"They aren't real diamonds, you know," she would explain. "They look real, don't they? But they

When visitors chanced to remark on the beauty of the Flemish woodwork in her home she would hasten to "But you know it isn't real oak -it's just pine stained. The effect is exactly as good and you couldn't tell the difference unless it was explained to you—but it isn't real oak at all!" One day she said to visitors: "No, father isn't rich enough to own an automobile." Yet these same visitors had been assured ten minutes before by her father that he disliked cheap cars and was waiting until American manufacturers did better work before he bought a machine.

Sometimes Mildred's despairing family would take her aside after such outbursts and remonstrate with her. Their words ranged from tearful supplication to roaring threats, but the effect in all cases was precisely nothing. Mildred would turn her rather, prominent, accusing eyes upon her mentor and say: "Well, but it's true, isn't it? What's wrong about telling the truth?"

As time went on her family de spaired of ever finding a cure for this obliquity of Mildred's mind. They her into a becomingly tactful state of was hopeless.

It irritated Mildred's mother to sail an old one sent her by a rich aunt and then to hear her daughter chirp: "You'd never guess mother hadn't gone downtown and bought that goods' by the yard, would you? Aunt Sarah is so much larger than mother that things cut down nicely for her!"

In response to her mother's somewhat heated remarks after this particular performance Mildred retorted; shocked: "Why, you actually weren't trying to make them think it was new when it wasn't, were you? That would be deceiving them!"

Of course, this reply would floor any perfectly good mother. Still, as Mildred's mother said, it was infuriating to have a daughter so devoid of common sense.

Another boy, Messenger Robbins, brought an elephant and its Indian keeper from Buxton to the Palladium and back, and rode on the animal's back on the return journey. A third boy was sent for in hot haste to a house in Bond street, where he found a terrified lady standing on a table. She refused to descend until the lad had captured the mouse which had frightened her.

HAVE LEARNED HOW TO SPELL

Reason Why One Man Thinks That the Intelligence of Juries Has Increased.

Having made the statement that juries are more intelligent than they used to be, the man who has often served as a juror backed it up with bits of his own experience.

"My chief reason for saying so is that juries nowadays do not have such a tussle with the word guilty as formerly," he said. "Several years ago I talked confidentially with a number of men who assured me that as soon as they learned they had been impaneled they looked up the spelling of 'guilty' and practiced writing it so that in case the jury lightning actually struck them and the accused should be convicted they would know how to write their opinion. Others of my associates were not so conscientious. If they believed a man guilty they said so, irrespective of dictionary rulings. Less than five years ago I served on a jury that pronounced a man guilty in four different orthographic forms besides the right one: Gilte, gillite, gille and gilty. So far as my observation goes most juries nowadays know how to spell guilty without especial coaching."

DOOM OF THE FAMILY?

Some delver in the mathematics of divorces has figured it out that, at the present rate of increase, 1990 will see one-half of all marriages in this country dissolved by legal proceedings.

A Missouri University professor makes this prophecy: "The family as a permanent union between man and wife will end in this country within a measureable length of time. Monogamy as an institution is doomed in the United States."

Conditions certainly are not promising. In 1905 our country had 68,-000 divorces, against 40,000 in the rest of the world.

All the time, the world is growing better. Improvement is sure to come in principles, means and methods of perpetuating the institution of the home. We who give consideration to present unpromising conditions will not be here in 1990. But those who shall be on the scene of the world's action and progress will | see such improvements in conditions of marriage as to reduce divorce to practical extinction.

DIVER'S NERVES PROVE TRUE

ness and Courage.

A successful diver must possess great courage and nerves of steel. Such a man connected with a large wrecking company was visiting some years ago the pearl fisheries in the Gulf of California, where sharks abounded. On one of his trips in quest of the pearl oyster he had a narrow escape from a fearful death.

He had been instructed never to stir from the bottom until he had looked up and around. Fortunately he heeded the advice. Having filled his bag, he glanced quickly about and caught sight of a huge shovel, nosed shark watching him.

In an emergency men think fast. Near the diver was a large rock. He moved quickly to the other side of it. hoping to dodge the ferocious monster, but the maneuver did not work. The shark watched every movement, tion of his powerful tail.

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape, He worked for dear life and had the water thick with mud in less than half a minute.

rose to the surface, having barely strength enough to reach the side of the boat, and was hauled on board just as the voracious man eater made a rush for him.

THE FLAT KITCHEN.

The architects of modern flats are indirectly instrumental in work for good housekeeping. The new kitchens are so dainty, so compact, so ingenious that they inspire any woman to keep them in perfect condition. The "parlor" may be an ordinary room. At best it will not have any more artistic features than paneled walls, a foyer hall or prismatic electric light fixtures. The kitchen is the plce on which the architect lavishes his ingenuity. Maybe it is electrically fitted with the most marvelous appliances for cooking, ironing and serving. If not, the porcelain tubs, folding clothes racks, shining nickel or copper taps, glass shelves, porcelain-lined ice boxes and a trim gas range are sufficiently attractive to lure any woman to spend a fair portion of her time "in their midst," der. A man may cheerfully afford to pay a little higher rent for one of these delightful kitchens. He is more than likely to make it up in an improved menu. At any rate, it is worth an experiment. Besides; you have to. All the flats are built that way now.

CRUELTY TO ENGLISH WORDS.

Fearful and wonderful are the uses to which some of our English words are put, uses for which they were never meant. The most conspicuous at the moment is the word skating. In a Parisian's mouth a skating is a rink, and he talks of one skating, two skatings and even a third with unblushing ineptness. Then there is the word smoking. This in Paris has nothing to do with either tobacco or opium. It merely means a man's dinner jacket. There is a pastry cook who makes butts on what he believes to be an English model, and he will sell you one buns, pronounced nasally, like burrs, for four sous.

JUST A LITTLE TOO FRESH

Boy Jumped at Conclusions and His Employer Thereby Lost a Customer.

Miss Louise Gunther, who returned recently from Chicago, where she was appearing in vaudeville, turned a bottle of red ink over while writing at her home at One Hundred and Twenty-first street and Amsterdam avenue and the first two fingers on her left hand were discolored. Miss Gunther applied soap and water immediately, and although she scrubbed industriously was unable to remove the ink entirely. She did fade it, though, until her fingers were brown instead of red.

The same afternoon she went to a delicatessen store near her home to get some material for her evening meal. A boy about sixteen years old waited on her. When he had wrapped up her bundles he leaned over the counter and, assuming a confidential air, said:

"I'll tell you how you can get that off your fingers if you want me to." "I wish you would," said the

"Rub the fingers with gasoline." "Will that remove it?"

"It took it of of my fingers," said the boy. "Try it and I'll bet you nobody won't know you ever smoked."

"I ever what?" she almost screamed.

"Why, smoked," said the boy. Miss Gunther hadn't paid for her purchases. "Here," she said, "you just take these back. I'll trade somewhere else. I never smoked in my life."-New York Telegraph.

WHAT PUZZLED THE WORKMAN

Sergeant Atkins had served for many year in foreign climes, and now he was traveling back to the village where he was born. In the carriage of the local train that carried him over the last stage of his journey he related some of the strange adventures which had befallen him. And the workmen present listened in open-mouthed wonder.

"In that battle," said the soldier, "we fought from eight in the morning till eight at night, and never stopped a moment."

"Sounds all right," said the only doubting one. "But—there's just one thing I don't understand."

"Indeed!" said the sunburnt warrior. "And what is it you don't understand?"

"Well, what I want to know is this," answered the horny-handed one, in a tone of subdued triumph. "How did you manage about the dinner hour-eh?"

"Yes, that's what I said," replied his better half.

"And you hadn't sense enough to see that it was a bare-faced swindle!" roared Sillicus. "Well, your money is gone now, and you have nothing to show for it."

"Why, yes I have, John," said his wife. "I have this man's receipt for the money."-Lippincott's.

HABITS OF THE SEMINOLES THE Indians of Florida Live in Open Houses-Calico Shirt and Derby Hat Their Costume.

The Seminole Indians of Florida sit, eat and sleep on platforms raised about three feet from the ground under the roofs of their open houses. In each village the houses are so arranged as to leave an open space in the middle of the camp, and in the center of this is a cooking house. Here food is constantly kept on the fire, for there are no hard and fast meal hours. They go about dressed in native costume. The men wear, on ordinary occasions, merely a shirt Matinee Daily 2 O'clock to 5:20 of gayly colored calico. To this they add, whenever they can obtain one, a derby hat and new bandana handkerchiefs around neck. This is their ordinary dress. On gala occasions they wear a turban, made of a shawl held together by a band of hammered silver, and sport an aigrette or an ostrich feather, beautiful woven bead belts with symbolic designs, leggings and moccasins of buckskin and a gorgeous calico coat. The use of buckskin upper garments has long since been discontinued on account of the heat; the leggings and moccasins have survived, but are no longer worn about the camps, for they would soon become wet and useless. The women are more fully clad than the men. Their costume consists of a shirt and a sleeved cape of calico. About their necks they wear enormous masses of beads, from the strings of which they often hang silver coins. Many of the women wear brooches or bangles beaten from silver coins by the native smiths. Like most Indians, the Seminoles do not care for gold in any form.

To Be Unveiled In Lexington This Week With Imposing Ceremonies.

COST $15,000 TO PRODUCE.

Mrs. L McF. Blakemore, of This City, Will Be One Of The Speakers.

The unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of the General John Hunt Morgan and His Men, which will be held in Lexington, Kentucky, on October the 18th, will be an event of wide-spread interest. This monument which is given by the United Daughters of the Confederacy has cost $15,000.00 to produce and it stands, not only as a memento of the great Confederate General, but also as a beautiful remembrance of the splendid efforts of these still more splendid women who have toiled faithfully in the work of raising the funds with which to defray the expenses of erecting

The unveiling ceremonies will be a fitting climax to the great convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy which will be held in Lexington this week. The ceremonies are of a very elaborate character and include General Basil W. Duke and Major Otis Tenney, Masters of Ceremonies, an invocation by the Reverend William T. Punch, an address by Governor Augustus E Willson, an address by the State President of the U. D. C., Mrs. L. McF. Blakemore, a prayer by the Reverend E. O. Guerrant, the beneon by the Reverend John R. chied address of the occasion will be delivered by Dr. Guy Carleton Lee of Baltimore, Maryland.

Immediately before the unveiling ceremonies, which will take place on the famous court house square ed, a session of the convention will been issued to Oct 1st. It shows a torium, and where a parade of mag. crease of 102 for the year.
